THE CHINA MAIL.

HONGKONG, FRIDAY, JUNE 13, 1879.

We have been favoured, by a friend who is in receipt, via Aden, of a copy of the Natal Mercury of April 28th, with a perusal of that paper. There are two articles in it specially worthy of attention.

In the first, which relates to the Boer's meeting with Sir Bartle Frere, with regard to the petition they proposed to send to the Queen, the High Commissioner said he would gladly forward it, but could on no account promise to support what he sincerely believed to be for their harm. He pointed out to the delegates who met him that the people would have far more independence under the British flag than under a Republic, laying bare with an unparalled hand the arbitrary acts that had been committed by, and the despotic tendencies of, the late Republic. He repeatedly assured the delegates that their countrymen would have as much liberty as had their compatriots in the Cape Colony and more even than was enjoyed in England; and he reminded them in unmistakable terms of the extent to which they had been betrayed by foreigners and adventurers. A remark by Mr Joubert, one of the spokesmen, that however kindly slaves might be treated they still preferred liberty, even if it had sufferings, called forth from Sir Bartle the rebuke that the speaker was indulging in out of place "talk-talk," and when he spoke of slavery was talking pure nonsense. The men who met Sir Bartle (Messrs Pretorius, Kruges, Joubert, Robinson, and others) claimed that they represented the whole people, and said that nothing short of independence would satisfy the Boers. Sir Bartle, with the same courtesy as he assumed for the whole interview, told them that the public mind outside the Republic had been greatly misled as to the unanimity of the movement, and that his experiences since he entered the Colony led him to believe that the desire for "independence" was anything but general. After hearing the High Commissioner's refusal to support the petition the delegates said they would not forward it; but eventually did so; and are, the Volkstem says, well satisfied with the covering despatch by Sir Bartle Frere. This being so, it is considered that for the present the Boer difficulty will cease to cause undue anxiety and that there will be no need to contemplate the possibility of military operations to the westward of the Zulu Border.
